

Holbung Hill is often referred to as the Hill of Love. It is always associated with the hill in the children's animated film Bukit Teletubbies. But whatever it is called, camping at Holbung Hill is one of the leading tourist destinations in Samosir Regency. Hotel stays for addicts who love to stay outdoors makes no sense. For young people who like nature, camping is part of their culture because camping time is not time spent. It is invested.

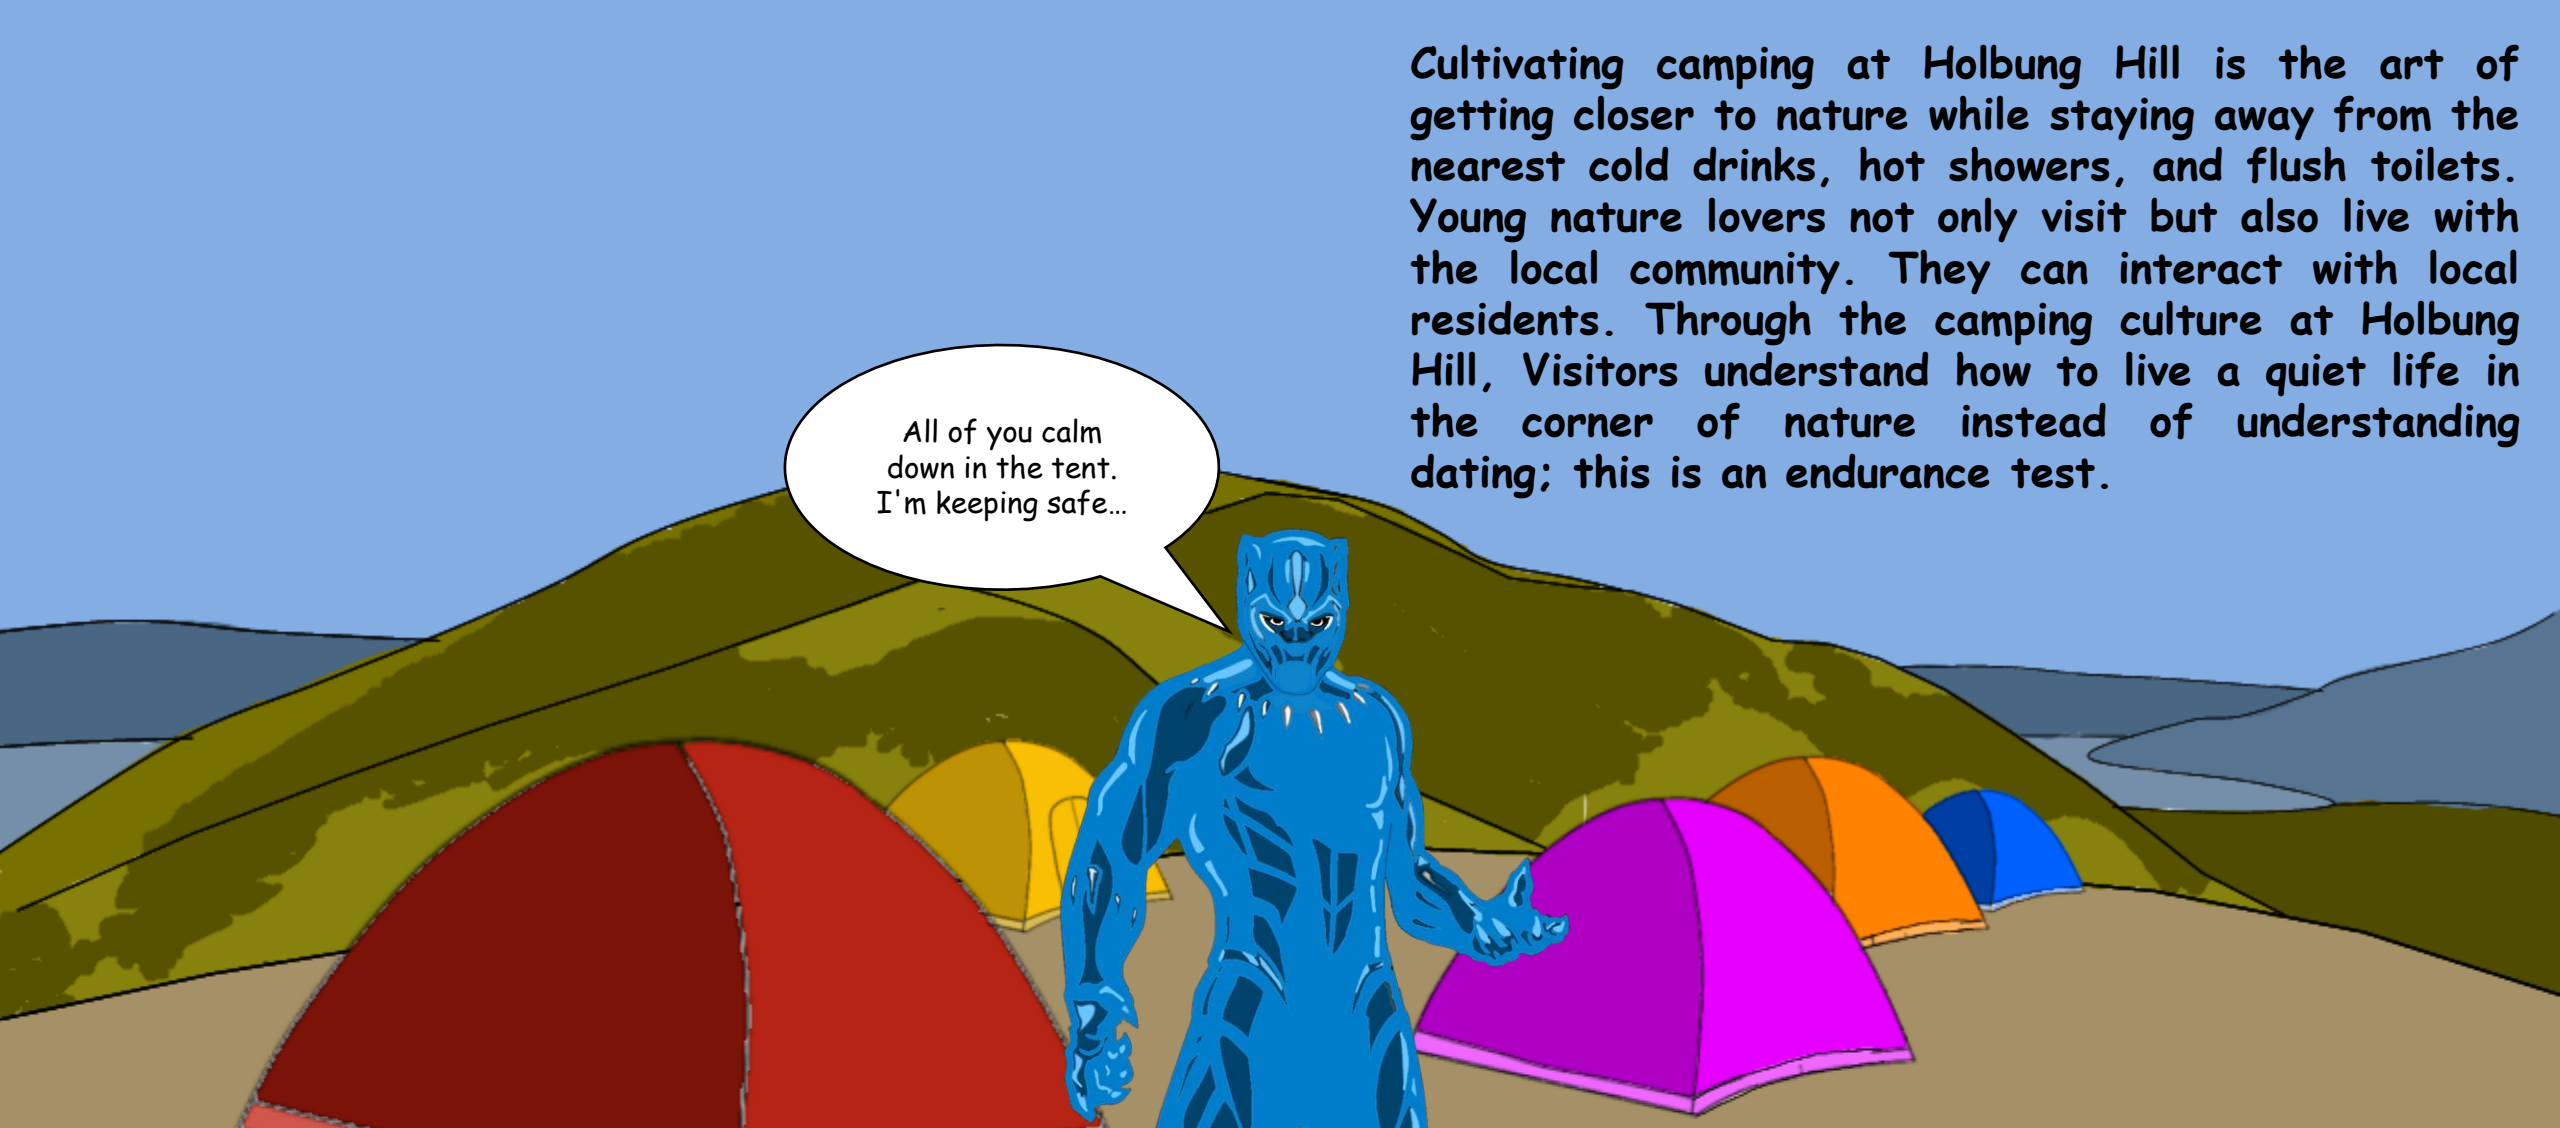

Whatever form it takes, camping is fun because it can enrich the soul and build your character as a young person. You will have some satisfying and enjoyable moments because all of your friends can be storytellers.

On a camping trip to Holbung Hill, visitors always meet various types of livestock in the valleys. The number is huge. Through camping activities, visitors will be introduced to the original culture and other sides of the life of the Batak ethnic population. Camping culture is a way of life for nature lovers to enjoy the earth and sky, forests and fields, lakes and rivers, mountains and the sea. The method of life can continue to evolve through camping activities because the nature around the camp makes excellent school teachers and teaches Visitors more than books can learn.

Cultivating camping at Holbung Hill is the art of getting closer to nature while staying away from the nearest cold drinks, hot showers, and flush toilets. Young nature lovers not only visit but also live with the local community. They can interact with local residents. Through the camping culture at Holbung Hill, Visitors understand how to live a quiet life in the corner of nature instead of understanding dating; this is an endurance test.

A blue Panther character, resembling the Marvel character T'Challa, stands in the center of a campsite. He is wearing his iconic blue suit with black claw-like details on the hands and feet. He has a serious expression. Behind him are several colorful tents: a large red one in the foreground, a yellow one, a purple one, an orange one, and a blue one. The background consists of rolling green hills under a clear blue sky.

All of you calm down in the tent.
I'm keeping safe...
