

Pusuk Buhit is a mountain that stands on Samosir Island and is a mountain that is very sacred to the Batak ethnic group. Various historical stories about the Batak ethnicity can be found on this mountain because this mountain is believed to be the Batak ethnicity as the birthplace of their ancestors called Siraja Batak. On Samosir Island, this was the first time Siraja Batak built a settlement. The story can be proven by several historical sites of Siraja Batak's heritage from previous generations. Even some of these sites are still used by the community to carry out traditional ceremonies.

Pusuk Buhit is a mountain that stands on Samosir Island and is a mountain that is very sacred to the Batak ethnic. Various historical stories about the Batak ethnicity can be found on this mountain because this mountain is believed to be the Batak ethnicity as the birthplace of their ancestors called Siraja Batak. On Samosir Island, this was the first time Siraja Batak built a settlement.

The background is a stylized illustration of a landscape. It features a light blue sky at the top, a dark green treeline, and a greyish-blue hillside. A sign with the text 'AEK RANGAT' is positioned on the hillside. The sign consists of a dark grey rectangular base with eight vertical grey poles of varying heights. The letters 'AEK RANGAT' are written in a bold, red, sans-serif font, with each letter resting on one of the poles. The hillside is depicted with a mottled grey and white pattern, suggesting a rocky or uneven terrain.

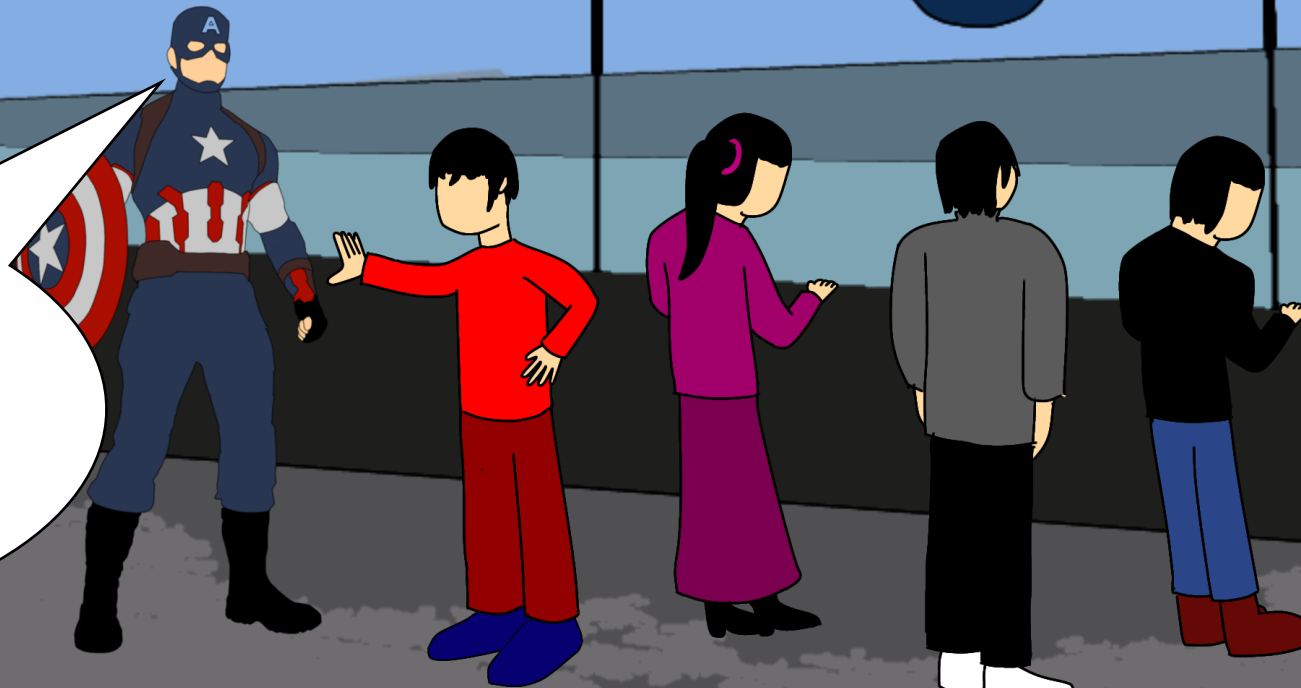

AEK RANGAT

The story can be proven by several historical sites of Siraja Batak's heritage from previous generations. Even some of these sites are still used by the community to carry out traditional ceremonies.

Of course, for those who have explored Mount Pusuk Buhit, the name of this one tourist attraction must be familiar because this attraction has been popular among tourists and has become a must-visit tourist attraction if you are on Mount Pusuk Buhit Samosir.

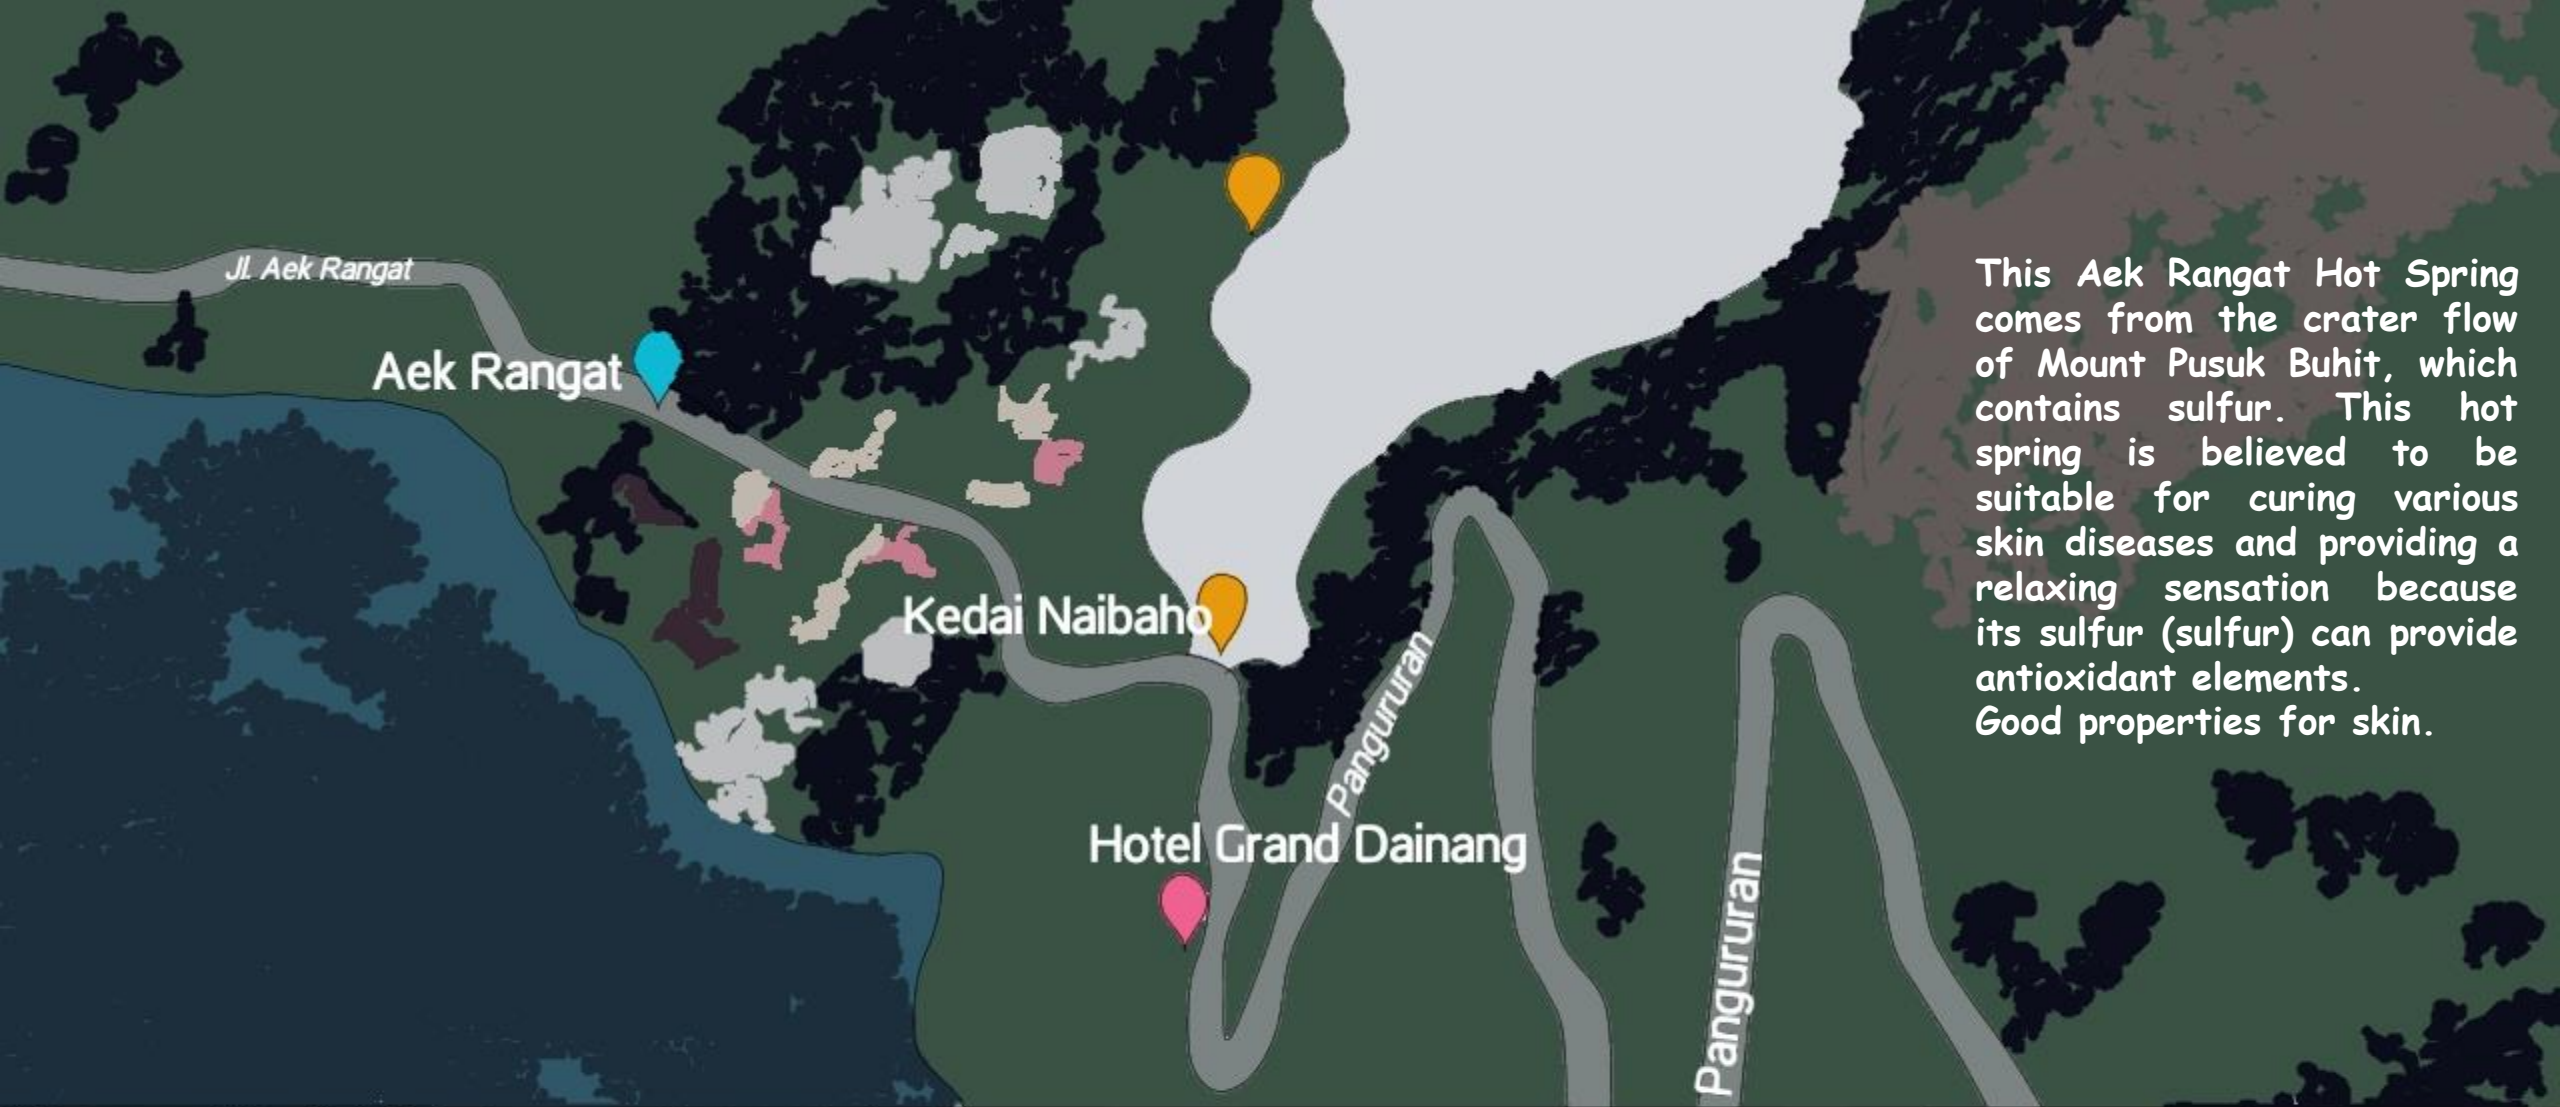

Aek Rangat

From the Aek Rangat viewing point, you can see the view of Lake Toba. The history of Lake Toba cannot be separated from the super-power eruption that formed this lake and the beauty surrounding it today. Natural disasters have changed the course of human history in the Batak lands. Although not everyone agrees on the impact, there is a link between these natural occurrences and socioeconomic changes that are truly amazing.

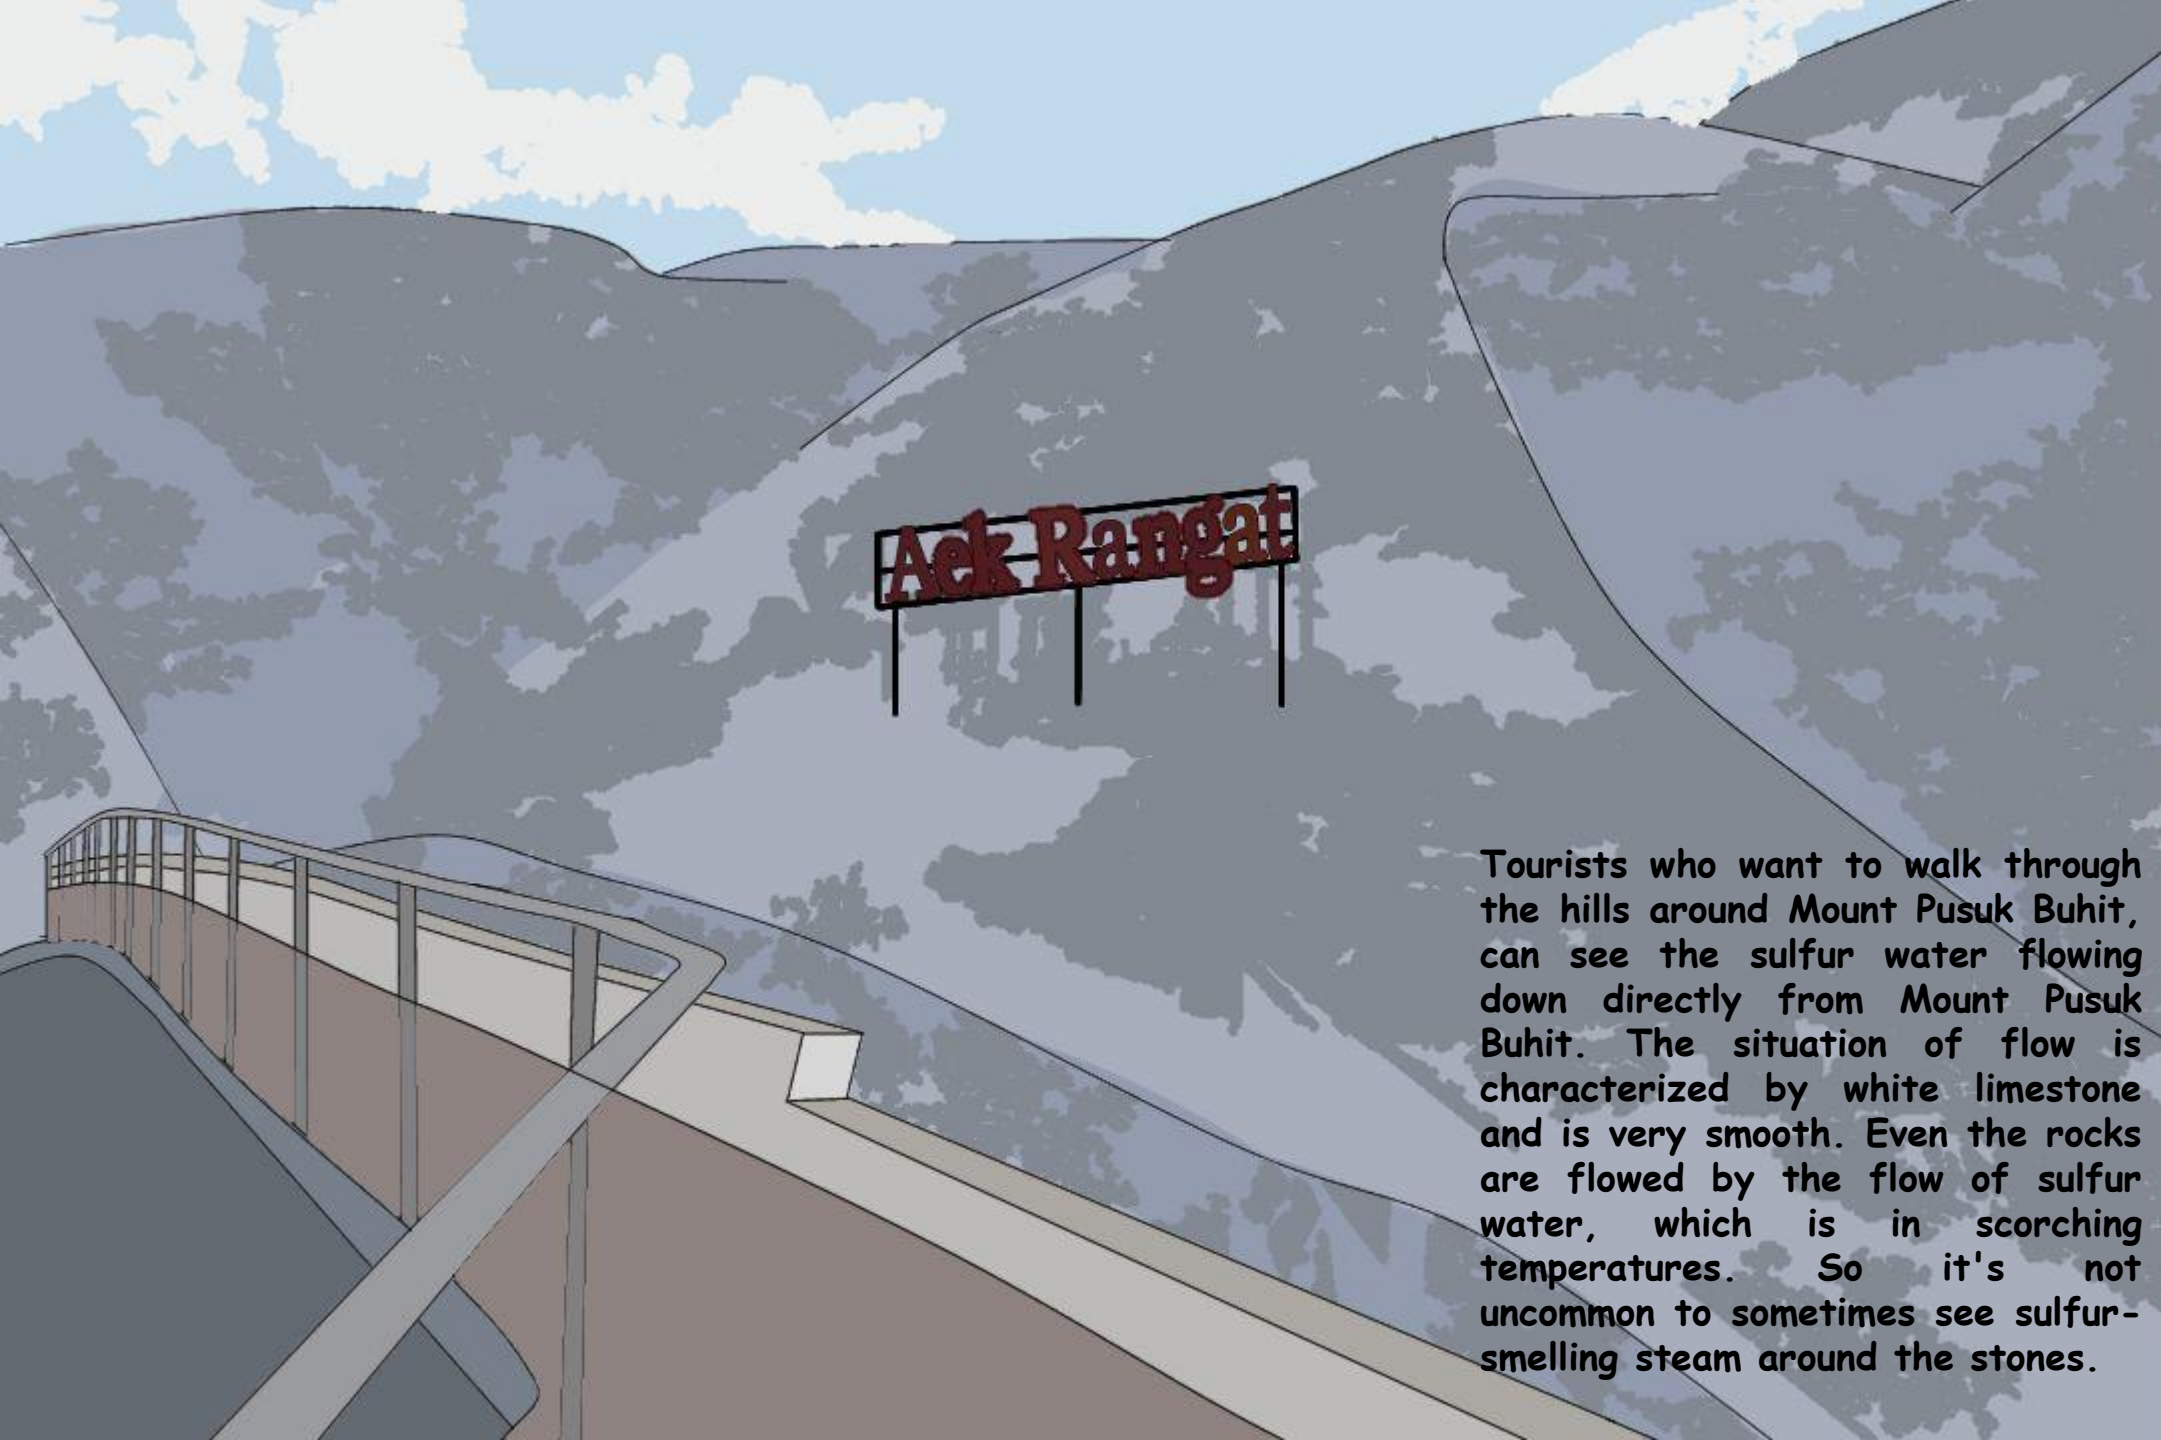

Aek Rangat is a hot spring area located on Mount Pusuk Buhit. Aek Rangat is located in Pangururan, one of the highland areas on Samosir Island with a cool climate. So that if visitors are around this area, the relaxed atmosphere and very natural landscape will spoil the eyes of tourists. Even in this area, visitors can see the exotica of the Batak ethnic village area, which still maintains its traditions and culture.

This Aek Rangat Hot Spring comes from the crater flow of Mount Pusuk Buhit, which contains sulfur. This hot spring is believed to be suitable for curing various skin diseases and providing a relaxing sensation because its sulfur (sulfur) can provide antioxidant elements. Good properties for skin.

Aek Rangat

Tourists who want to walk through the hills around Mount Pusuk Buhit, can see the sulfur water flowing down directly from Mount Pusuk Buhit. The situation of flow is characterized by white limestone and is very smooth. Even the rocks are flowed by the flow of sulfur water, which is in scorching temperatures. So it's not uncommon to sometimes see sulfur-smelling steam around the stones.